

Friendly Letters to the Society of Friends: On Some of Their Distinguishing Principles (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from Friendly Letters to the Society of Friends: On Some of Their Distinguishing Principles Friends, In so addressing you, I wish to be understood as using, not merely the distinctive designation by which you have chosen to denominate yourselves as a body of professing Christians, but a designation expressive of personal regard. I have not been an inattentive or uninterested observer of the agitation that has, for some time past, pervaded your society; and I have felt a strong inclination, blending with a hardly less strong repugnance, to show mine opinion. - The cause of my repugnance may be easily imagined. I may seem to many an officious inter-meddler. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
