Not illustrated. 1842 Excerpt: ...whether in support of any petition complaining of the return, or by way of recrimination, or in answer to any petition, shall be withdrawn, abandoned, or not bonafide. prosecuted before the said committee, it shall and may be lawful for such committee in its discretion to examine into and ascertain the circumstances under which such withdrawal, abandonment, or forbearance to prosecute such charges as aforesaid shall hare taken place, and whether the same has been matter of compromise, arrangement, or understanding, covert or otherwise, in order to avoid the discovery of bribery at the said election; and the said committee shall be authorised, if it shall think fit, to state in their report upon the election petition any special matter relating to the said charges of bribery, and the cause and reason of the abandonment or forbearance to prosecute the same; and for the more effectual discovery of the truth of the matters so to be inquired into, full power and authority is hereby given to such committee to examine the sitting; Member or Members, or candidate or candidates at the said election, and their several and respective agents, and all other persons whomsoever, touching and concerning such matters. Well, that was giving a power only to inquire into the cause of the abandonment of the petition--nothing more; but in the following clause it was enacted-- That if any committee nominated to try an election petition shall report that there are grounds for believing that extensive or general bribery was practised at the election to which such report shall refer, and shall recommend that further inquiry and investigation should be made regarding such bribery, in that case the Speaker shall nominate an agent to prosecute the investigation into the mat...
