Not illustrated. 1889 Excerpt: ...since the collapse of the mackerel fishery, it is the largest in the whole Bay Chaleur and Straits of Northumberland. How much longer it will continue to be a profitable industry depends entirely upon the measures now adopted to prevent its exhaustion. FROST-FISH AND FLOUNDERS. While the demand for these fishes continues to increase at higher prices, the supply, like that of smelts, is growing smaller. In 1886 the catch of frost-fish was 713,875 pounds; this year it is 174,95 pounds. The catch of flounders in 187 was 122,470 pounds; in 1878 it fell to 83,650 pounds, and yet the demand for both was greater at higher prices. No more convincing proof can be offered, were such necessary, of the destruction caused by bag-nets, than their effects on these fishes, In 1871 both were very plentiful. The complaint of fishermen was that they obstructed the catch of smelts. At that time vast quantities were wasted because no market had been found for their disposal. Now that ample markets and remunerative prices are offered the supply is quite inadequate to the demand. This has been the history of all our fisheries, and coming generations will lament the stupid and wasteful ways of their progenitors. TROUT. It is quite impossible to get even an approximation to the quantity of trout taken in the province. Only the quantity exported and that which comes to our local markets can be ascertained. But these form a very small part of the catch by anglers and potfishers who frequent all our lakes and streams from spring to fall. The quantity exported falls short of last year's figures by 18,000 pounds. The close season should extend to 1st May, in order that fishing through the ice may be prevented. HERRING.
