

Sermons on Various Subjects, Vol. 4 of 4 (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from Sermons on Various Subjects, Vol. 4 of 4 Obedience to Gods commanding will, and submission to his disposing will, are undoubtedly the two great branches which comprehend the whole of practical religion. The former I have frequently urged, and the latter I shall now recommend to your consideration and regard from this most memorable instance which we have here before us in Aaron, the high priest of the Lord; whose two sons, Nadab and Abihu, had just been struck dead by the Lord for presuming to present strange fire before him contrary to a command which he had lately given.
