Not illustrated. 1896 Excerpt: ... their outer edges fringed with white; secondaries and centre of the wings grey. Strongly marked with zigzag transverse lines of black; two middle tail feathers green, with bronzy reflections on their outer webs, only the minor webs black; all six are largely tipped with black; the remaining six black at base and white at the tip, the middle portions of these later feathers barred with black and white; bill yellow. Total length about 12, wing 6, tail 7J. (Gould, Monograph of the Trogonida..) See also Sclaters Birds of Borneo: Iroc. 7.oo. Soc., 1813. p. 213. Bushy Crested Hornbill. Anorrhinus galeritus (Hydroeissa galerita). Dyak Omen Bird. Though this species was not uncommon in the forests around Malawoon and Bankasoon, yet it was so very wary and difficult to approach, that only one specimen (a male) was shot by ourselves. We saw them almost daily, always in small parties of five or six, keeping to the densest portions of the forest and the tops of the highest trees. They never fly together, but always one after another in a string or line. When about to start, they set up a sort of gabbling chorus, and after a few seconds, perhaps half a minute, of vociferous altercation one flies away, followed immediately by another and another, till all have left. Their note is verysimilar to that of A. alberostris (malabarica), and, like these, they continually utter it at short intervals so long as they remain perched. (Elliott, Monograph of the Bucerotidae, pi. 10.) See also Sclaters Birds of Borneo, Proc.Zool.Soc, 1863, p. 214. If they hear a pisit or bukang on their left, they stop, wherever they maybe, for the rest of the day; and if a kihinng, a tetajan, an asi, or a mangilieng, they are bound to remain where they are for two days. ...
